Take Inventory Of Season's Fads

Lines and Colors Show New Tendencies—Attractive Novelties Numerous.

Besides taking count of the absolutely new, it is wise occasionally to take a general survey of the lines being worn at the moment by the leading fashionables. An observing glance at skirts, for instance, shows that skirts are short—decidedly so. They are also full, pleated, ruffled, circular and of straight gathered folds. Taffeta for these bouffant skirts is the favorite material in one-piece frocks. To stand out is the obvious ambition of the fashionable skirt. It is true, however, that fashionables are often seen wearing rather narrow foundation skirts, over which is hung a full tunic, the latter performing the "stand out" duty. So much for the fashionable skirt in survey.

The hem edge of the skirt is an important consideration this season. One of the latest methods of finishing it is to bind it with a self-material cord and then to attach over it leaf-shaped bits of the material, bases down and points toward the waist.

Clever Wrist Bags.
Departing from a discussion of lines, have you seen the new bracelet bags? They're the nicest, prettiest things ever. The bag is a pouch, quite in the shape of the season's bag, but the frame is supplemented by a bracelet of the same metal or shell, as the case may be. The bag can then be swung from the wrist, with no danger of going too far back on the hand or slipping over the hand unnoticed. Carved and tinted leather is used for some of the high-priced bags. When placed over a foundation of metal cloth or silk it forms a very odd, charming handbag. Some new bags have a blue note. Madonna blue is the color chosen, and it is usually combined with black kid. Midnight blue is being combined with white in belts, emphasizing the rumor that blue and white will soon supplant the wonderfully popular black and white. Pique bags and bags of white silk, made quite after the fashion of the soft leather models, are now to be had for carrying with white suits. They are very smart, and the pique bags are washable.

Ruffled shoulder capes or nighties—that's the latest. Pretty little ruffles of net or ribbon that go round and round the shoulders and fall over the upper parts of the arms. Charming negligees of chiffon are stenciled in conventional designs. The effect is Japanese, kimono lines being somewhat followed.

I must not forget to tell you of the dainty white kid belts that are lined with flowered silk. There is no hint of pretty lining until the belt is removed—just another touch of daintiness for daintiness' sake, and well worth while as such.

Butterfly Girdles.
Butterfly girdles are just the thing for the simple summer frock of sheer muslin. These girdles come in all the pastel shades. They are wide and crushed, and the soft silk made into a complete butterfly at the back, body, antennae and all. Tiny white-headed butterflies are stuck in at the proper angle for eyes.

Rubber corsets are now sold for bathing purposes. These corsets are not elastic. Sheet rubber is used. They are wonderfully comfortable and the water has but little if any effect upon them for a considerable length of time.

Sports handkerchiefs are here. This season the handkerchief must be distinguished by individual touch or smart note of decided importance will be lacking in the costume. The sports handkerchiefs referred to are button-holed instead of hemmed about the edges. The buttonholing is done in color, to harmonize with or match the bit of corner embroidery. Instead of being a mere initial, monogram or floral design, the corner displays a horse and rider, a golfer, tennis player or some other sportsman in action.

These are done in color and silk, much on the same order, in fact, as the silk stockings at the beginning of the season which showed quaint and weird little animals worked upon the instep in natural colors. A handkerchief for afternoon carrying has upon it a full-skirted ballet dancer skipping through a garden of roses.

Flowered Bathing Caps.
Another novelty for bathing garb is the flower trimmed cap or hat. Lovely rubber flowers, some far more realistic in appearance than those artificial blooms made of silk or linen, come especially for bathing millinery. Water affects them not in the least, except to make them even prettier when glistening from immersion.

Top coats of tussah are excellent for the warm days. Then, too, they answer so many purposes. A new English duster of shantung simulates successfully a separate jacket and full skirt, looking for all the world like a tussah suit. The lines are good and it is expected that the new idea will meet with approval.

It cannot be expected that the black-and-white in fashion will hold place forever and a day, though many authorities claim that it is becoming standardized. That it will eventually have to assume second place, however, is not to be doubted.

Designers having this in mind are already experimenting with other colors, and one finds the midnight blue and white already mentioned, and now an attempt to launch Quaker gray. While Quaker gray is a very beautiful, it has the disadvantage of not being becoming to all complexions. However there are warm grays and cold grays, and grays of many tints and tones, and if the color comes really fashionable a careful selection among the shades of the color may obviate the difficulty anticipated.

GIVES RECITAL.
A pipe organ recital was rendered last night at the Grace Methodist Episcopal church by Van Denman Thompson, professor in the DePaul School of Music. More than 500 persons attended.
